

Duncan Ingram, Inc. is a development company which enables businesses to create, manage and market a successful web presence. Our team has provided traditional desktop and web application programming services to businesses the world over. Our hosting architecture was developed in house to be fault-tolerant against single point of failure in data centers we utilize across the US.

Founders Andrew Duncan and Kimberly Ingram hold a special interest in the application of emerging technology and cross-discipline research to the higher education, medical, and medical education sectors.

We can assist your company in using the same tools that are driving the IT industry, keeping you ahead of the curve with a competitive advantage.
